Codan wins prestigious national export award

Adelaide, South Australia, December 21, 2011 — Codan Limited won the Information and Communication Technology (ICT) National Award at The 49th Australian Export Awards.

Codan was one of eight highly regarded IT finalists competing for the ICT award held at a gala event within the Brisbane Convention and Exhibition Centre. On hand to accept the award was Managing Director and Chief Executive Officer Donald McGurk.

“We’re extremely pleased to have won this award, which acknowledges the phenomenal effort of our people,” Mr. McGurk said.

“Codan’s business strength is in managing a complex manufacturing supply chain and offering innovative solutions to our customers. This includes selling radio and mine clearance detectors to remote and sometimes difficult to reach countries, satellite equipment to first world satellite systems integrators, and metal detectors into mainstream consumer markets.”

Headquartered in Adelaide, South Australia over 85 per cent of Codan’s revenue is derived from sales to export markets in over 150 countries.

“We are extremely proud that a large percentage of our suite of products is used for development, humanitarian and life saving activities in developing countries,” Mr. McGurk said.

Codan has a rich history of exporting excellence dating back to 1975 when it won its first Australian Export Award for outstanding export achievement.

The Australian Export Awards is one of the nation’s most prestigious and longest-running business awards programs. It recognises and honors highly credentialed Australian companies who have led the push into overseas export markets, and achieved sustainable export growth through innovation and commitment.
